

A Sounder Story

Neosho's Nose

Neosho, a curious Red River Hog, lived in the African Savannah. He woke up one morning refreshed and excited to begin his day. His family of young piglets began to play and run around him as they grunted and squealed.

Neosho used his super-sniffing-nose to smell out some food near his home. His nose snuffled, and snorted, as he smelled all around. Then his nose caught a whiff of some tasty food in the ground, so he dug it out with his nose!

A delicious root was deep within the soil. The sounder of pigs found and snacked on roots, fruits, and grasses. After their meal, they played in the mud to cool them from the sun outside and from bugs. Finally, a muddy, comfy Neosho settled down for his afternoon nap.
