

Goin' on a Bug Hunt!

Time to put on your naturalist hat! Put your observation skills and nature journaling to the test with the incredible diversity of insect life right in your own backyard.

Find an insect near your home and watch it without disturbing it as it goes about the day. Take notes, snap photos, or draw pictures of what you see. This little critter might do something you wouldn't expect!

A collage of various insects: a monarch butterfly, a swallowtail butterfly, a ladybug, a blue butterfly, a black beetle, and two wasps. These insects are scattered around several colorful circles containing questions for a bug hunt activity.

What is it doing?

Does it move in a pattern?

Where is it going?

What does it eat?

What color is it?

Does it interact with other insects?

How does it move it's body?

How big is it?
